

January 13, 2021

COLLOQUIUM NEWSFLASH

---

Innovative Strategies and Tools to Enrich Knowledge

2021 Teaching and Learning Colloquium Virtual Series: Talking About Teaching – Creating Inclusive Classrooms at RPI

The Teaching and Learning Collaboratory and the School of Humanities, Arts, and Social Sciences are pleased to announce the 2021 Rensselaer Teaching and Learning Colloquium. The colloquium this year will be a virtual format offering seven discussion sessions that will run through April 2021. Our theme is Talking About Teaching – Creating Inclusive Classrooms at RPI. The sessions will kick off on January 20, 2021. Our focus for this year is to work on creating more inclusive classrooms at RPI. We are pleased to be working with experts on our campus who will share information on various topics.

Upcoming Sessions include:

- What “works” for Rensselaer Students?
- Cultivating an inclusive classroom by using a trauma-informed approach
- Deep Listening as Method
- Empathy, Environment, & Engagement (Eliminating Exclusion)
- Women in STEM
- Issues Facing LGBTQ+ Students in the Classroom
- Disability/Neural Diversity

To view descriptions for each of the sessions and to register, please visit 2021 Teaching and Learning Colloquium Virtual Series Registration